the States by providing funds under the Accelerated Rural Water Supply Programme (ARWSP) and the Prime Minister's Gramodaya Yojana (PMGY).

As per the NCAER Survey-1994, 52 per cent of all villages in India did not have any source of protected drinking water. The Government of India has also undertaken a nation-wide survey to assess the status of drinking water supply in rural habitations through the State Governments in 1991, which was got validated in 1994. The survery was carried out with reference to rural habitation, and not village, as the unit for categorizing the coverage status. This survey indicated that in 1994. out of total number of 1318699 rural habitations in the country, 747347 were fully covered, 430377 were partially covered and 140975 were yet to be covered with drinking water facilities in 1994. Hence, 56.67 per cent of the rural habitations were fully covered with drinking water supply facilities in 1994. As such the difference in coverage figures between the two survey results is marginal.
